

Groundwater in a Changing World Panel

Mr Ross Carruthers

Ross Carruthers recently retired after 41 years working in the public sector in Australia to improve the management of groundwater resources.

Ross had a lead role in the development and implementation of groundwater management arrangements in many groundwater systems across Queensland and South Australia. He places particular emphasis on community engagement and in working in partnership with the community to develop shared solutions to complex groundwater management problems.